SHOEBILLS

What is a shoebill?

Depending on your perspective, a shoebill either has the same goofy charm as the long-lost dodo or it looks like it might go on the attack any moment.

What makes the aptly named shoebill so unique is its foot-long bill that resembles a Dutch clog. Tan with brown splotches, it's five inches wide and has sharp edges and a sharp hook on the end. Its specialized bill allows the shoebill to grab large prey, including lungfish, tilapia, eels, and snakes. It even snacks on baby crocodiles and Nile monitor lizards.

At first glance, shoebills don't seem like they could be ambush predators. Reaching up to five feet tall with an eight-foot wingspan, shoebills have yellow eyes, gray feathers, white bellies, and a small feathered crest on the back of their heads. They also have long, thin legs with large feet that are ideal for walking on the vegetation in the freshwater marshes and swamps they inhabit in East Africa, from Ethiopia and South Sudan to Zambia.

Shoebills can stay motionless for hours, so when a hapless lungfish comes up for air, it might not notice this lethal prehistoric-looking bird looming until it's too late. The birds practice a hunting technique called "collapsing," which involves lunging or falling forward on their prey.

Shoebills are in a family all their own, though they were once classified as storks. They do

There were almost 1.4 billion tourists in the world in 2018 according to UN World Tourism Organization. As one of them, I paid a visit to 4 Muslim countries share traits with storks and herons, like the long necks and legs characteristic of wading birds, though their closest relatives are the pelicans. Though they're mainly silent, shoebills sometimes engage in bill-clattering, a sound made as a greeting and during nesting. They keep cool with a technique called gular fluttering—vibrating the throat muscles to dissipate heat. Chicks sometimes make hiccup-like sounds when they're hungry.

Reproduction

Shoebills reach maturity at three to four years old, and breeding pairs are monogamous. These birds are very solitary in nature, though, and even mating pairs will feed at opposite sides of their territory. Breeding pairs build nests on water or on floating vegetation, and can be up to eight feet wide. Females lay an average of two eggs at the end of the rainy season.

As co-parents, both birds tend to the eggs and young. This includes incubating and turning eggs, and cooling them with water they bring to the nest in their large bills. Hatching occurs in about a month. Chicks have bluish-gray down covering their bodies and a lighter colored bill. Only one chick typically survives to fledge.

Conservation

The International Union for the Conservation of Nature estimates that there are only between 3,300 and 5,300 adult shoebills left in the world, and the population is going down. As land is cleared for pasture, habitat loss is a major threat, and sometimes cattle will trample on nests. Agricultural burning and pollution from the oil industry and tanneries also affect their habitats. Shoebills are hunted as food in some places, and in others, they're hunted because they're considered a bad omen. Which is very tragicomic.

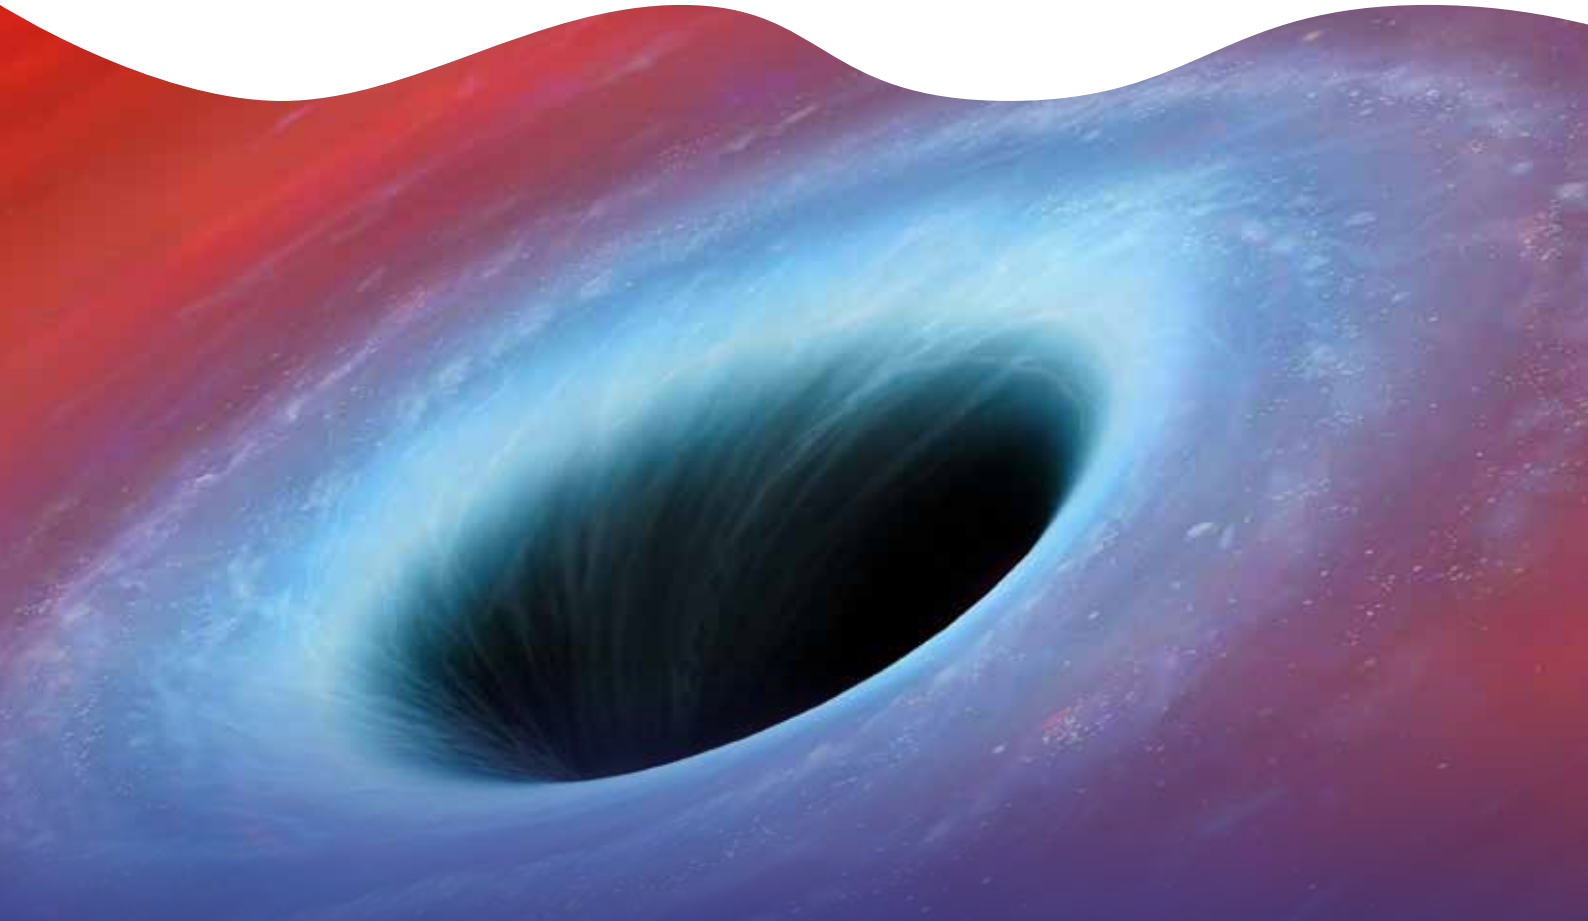

JOSÉ'S ECOLOGICAL BANK

José lives in Peru. He was 7 years old when he founded the first ecological bank for children. His motivation is to fight poverty among children!

Jose himself grew up in poverty. Just like many of his peers he had no money for school stuff or regularly went to school without breakfast regularly. Now he teaches children at different schools in Peru in on how to save money and how to keep the environment clean.

The project started of with 20 children and has now grown to some 2,500 children students. All of them can afford their school fees now. José strives to offer education to at least 20.000 children more.

BLACK HOLES

What is a Black Hole ?

A black hole is a place in space where gravity pulls so much that even light can not get out. The gravity is so strong because matter has been squeezed into a tiny space. This can happen when a star is dying.

How Big Are Black Holes ?

Black holes can be big or small. Scientists think the smallest black holes are as small as just one atom. These black holes are very tiny but have the mass of a large mountain. Mass is the amount of matter, or “stuff,” in an object.

Another kind of black hole is called “stellar.” Its mass can be up to 20 times more than the mass of the sun. There may be many, many stellar mass black holes in Earth’s galaxy. Earth’s galaxy is called the Milky Way.

The largest black holes are called “supermassive.” These black holes have masses that are more than 1 million suns together. Scientists have found proof that every large galaxy contains a supermassive black hole at its center. The supermassive black hole at the center of the Milky Way galaxy is called Sagittarius A. It has a mass equal to about 4 million suns and would fit inside a very large ball that could hold a few million Earths.

Note: 1 million 300 thousand earths can fit on the sun.
Could a Black Hole Destroy Earth

There were almost 1.4 billion tourists in the world in 2018 according to UN World Tourism Organization. As one of them, I paid a visit to 4 Muslim countries

Black holes do not go around in space eating stars, moons and planets. Earth will not fall into a black hole because no black hole is close enough to the solar system for Earth to do that.

Even if a black hole the same mass as the sun were to take the place of the sun, Earth still would not fall in. The black hole would have the same gravity as the sun. Earth and the other planets would orbit the black hole as they orbit the sun now.

Note: The sun will never turn into a black hole. The sun is not a big enough star to make a black hole.

ANIMAL FACTS

Silent Flying Owls

The owls are a breed of bird. Their all body is covered with thin and soft feathers. They have got sharp claws. They can fly silently. The owls catch their preys at the night. Their eyes are in front of their heads like people. They can turn their heads 180 degrees. They don't blink their eyes because they have transparent eyelid. Allah has created the owls beautifully.

Why the animals living on the poles colours are usually white?

Melanin is secretion which gives the animals their colour. Animals living in the poles are white because the animals produce the melanin in hot place but the poles are very cold. So the animals don't produce melanin in the poles and the animals colour are white. The animals which don't produce melanin named as albino.

WHY IS ENGLISH IMPORTANT?

Out of the 6 500 spoken languages in the world today, why choose to learn English? As the third most widely spoken language in the world, English is widely spoken and taught in over 118 countries and is commonly used around the world as a trade language or diplomatic language. It is the language of science, aviation, computers, diplomacy and tourism. Last but not least, it is the language of international communication, the media and the internet.,

Although English is not the most spoken language in the world, it is the official language in 53 countries and is spoken as a first language by around 400 million people worldwide. Nowadays, many films, TV shows, books and music are published and produced in English. As highlighted before, since English is spoken as a first language in 53 countries and as a second language in over 118 countries, learning the language makes it much easier to travel anywhere.

Learning a foreign language enhances your cognitive and analytical abilities. Learning a new language can be difficult and it involves a lot of mental exercises.

HYDRA

There's a small, tentacled freshwater animal called a hydra, whose mouth disappears every time it closes.

I really mean that: it disappears. When your mouth closes, the two halves are still distinct. No matter how tightly you purse your lips together, they are still separate bits of flesh. The same is true for the enormous mouths of whales and the tiny ones of mice, the beaks of birds and the expandable jaws of snakes. But not a hydra its closed mouth fuses shut to form a continuous, sealed sheet. In the words of one scientist, "when a hydra closes its mouth, it obliterates it." Which means that whenever a hydra opens its mouth, it must tear itself apart.

There were almost 1.4 billion tourists in the world in 2018 according to UN World Tourism Organization. As one of them, I paid a visit to 4 Muslim countries

In Greek mythology, Hydra was a venomous, many-headed snake monster with amazing powers of regeneration. Real hydras... aren't actually that far off. They're small and not that terrifying, but their shape—a tubular body crowned by wavy tentacles—recalls the beast of mythology. Like their cousins, the jellyfish, sea anemones, and corals, they're armed with stinging cells that fire venomous harpoons. And they do regenerate with incredible skill; some biologists have even suggested that they're effectively immortal. They are amazing creatures.

FRANK THE CHICKEN

One day, there was a chicken, Named Frank. And Frank had a dream, He wanted to fly, like all the other birds (most of them)

But he needed a plan, so he made the plan. But he wanted to fly in a weird way.

He would steal a car, then use that car to steal an armored car and then use that armored car to steal a tank, and then also use that tank to steal a swimmable armored car!

Ok that's enough. But he needed some fuel to fly a car. So he was going to rob a store then use that money to buy jet fuel, And when he jumped into the water, he would be ready to take off!

So he started his plan...

He saw a beautiful car, then ran for it.

Then he started driving the car using his ultimate chicken driving skills.

And he was on his way to steal the vehicles he needed.

He stole the armored car, the tank, and his super manly APC. Yes, it was an armored, very expensive, and most important, a pink APC that could swim.

Now he was on his way to rob the 12/7 store.

when he got there, he pointed a gun! and told the cashier to put the money in the bag.

But little did he know... That there was a woman with Very heavy, strong fully automatic gun that could shoot 8 bullets per second! A minigun. Frank grabbed the money and left the store, luckily no one was hurt.

Now he needed some Fuel, he started driving to the gas station. When he got there, he got enough fuel for himself but the money wasn't even close to afford that amount of fuel! so he straight up just blew up the whole gas station after getting the fuel.

Frank is not a really good chicken to be honest.

Now he needed to get to the dock, jump into the water and takeoff. He started driving to the dock but then out of nowhere a lightning bolt struck the ground! it started raining heavily, but that wasn't the only thing... The cars were going faster than a plane! This could mean only one thing, he checked the time, it was 7 A.M.

Los Angeles Rush Hour. The rush hour would end at 10 A.M.

But Frank didn't want to wait, so he started driving!

He was so eager to fly, that he didn't stop no matter what happened.

The cars that were flying, the falling planes, everything that was hitting him.

None of them could stop him!

His car was damaged, but he managed to get to the dock.

He jumped into the water with his car and took off.

He had actually done it! He was flying better than any other bird!

He was so fast, He could even go to the space, and that's what he did.

Frank was finally happy.
